Eczema, psoriasis, and contact dermatitis are chronic skin disorders that are common in children but can occur in adults as well. These skin disorders commonly occur in people who suffer from asthma and hay fever. The current consensus in the scientific community is that skin disorders such as eczema, psoriasis, and contact dermatitis are the result of abnormal immune (autoimmune) response episodes. During normal immune response against infection the human body significantly increases the level of lymphocytes a form of white blood cells (leukocytes) circulating throughout the body to eliminate microorganism and toxins. Lymphocytes regulate cytokines that initiation inflammation and recruit phagocyte cells that utilizes a delicate balance of hydrogen peroxide, hydroxide ion radical, and super oxygen anion radical as bio-physiological weapons to eliminate infections, allergens, and toxins. However, in some people due to reason not complete understood, microorganism (e.g. bacteria, fungi, yeast, and allergens) can interfere with the immune defense system result in sever inflammation, itching, dryness, and damaged skin. It is currently accepted that inherited genetic factors are the major causes for autoimmune response mechanism.

Hair loss is generally the result of genetic and hormonal factors, diseases of the hair and scalp, or over-treatment with chemicals. Hair loss can be caused by psoriasis in which there are thick plaques of scale on the scalp. These plaques in the scalp prevent hair growth by blocking oxygen to the hair follicles. Hair recover can occur once the skin condition is controlled.

Topical and oral treatments contain natural oils and moisturizers, synthetic steroids and antihistamines to relieve the symptomatic effects or inflammation and itching. Although the use of steroids has shown some success in relieving inflammation, prolong use of steroids come with potential harmful side effects. Observed side effects from the prolong use of steroids are adrenal gland suppression, Cushing Syndrome, skin thinning, and stretch marks.

Newer non-steroidal topical immune modulators derived from bacterial organisms in clinical trials have been reported to reduce itching and inflammation by turning off the human response mechanism. The drug sold under the name Pimecrolimus Elidel (1%) works by blocking the body's ability to produce cytokines in the immune system. Treatment with Pimecrolimus may increase the possibility of chicken pox, herpes simplex viral infections, eczema herpeticum, or viral warts in people who have compromised immune systems. Recent information from the use of Elidel has revealed that some of the people who used this product developed cancer.

Propecia or oral finasteride is one popular anti-androgenic drug currently being used to treat pre-mature balding. Propecia functions by inhibiting the effect of 5-alpha reductase on testosterone, thereby preventing the production of dihydrotestosterone (DHT). Accumulation of DHT in the scalp is responsible for hair loss. Propecia also does not increase the rate of hair growth but only prevents further hair loss due to undesirable hormonal effects. Individuals using Propecia for extended periods of time may experience impotence, loss of libido, and reduced sperm counts.

Rogaine minoxidil is another popular used medication for the treatment of male pattern baldness. This drug was originally developed to treat high blood pressure but was observed to stimulate the growth of hair on some parts of the body. Successful treatment with Rogaine requires that the product be used for a lifetime. Discontinuing the use of Rogaine will cause a regression to pretreatment stage of baldness in as little as 3 weeks. Rogaine has the following side effects: itching and prickling, headaches, dizzy spells and in some, heartbeat irregularities. Rogaine is not recommended for anyone who has heart trouble and is long-term safety in men over the age of 49 remains unknown.

"The founding of Xcel Nutraceuticals comes as a result of wanting to help others. It began with the story I heard of a toddler that suffered from eczema to the point where she had severe hair loss and scalp damage. All previously prescribed medications had failed to provide any sustained results. As a scientist I understood the side effects of steroid base products so I began to look for more natural remedies that might help relieve the discomforts associated with eczema. Combining 25 years of industrial research experience investigating free radical reactions with knowledge that I acquired from studying the science of plants (botany), I soon realized that plants and fruit life forms protect themselves using antioxidants and stabilizing agents similar in chemical structure and reaction pathways as what is found in the human immune system. It was upon this wise that I began to experiment with plant, flower, and fruit extracts combined with natural oils, vitamins, essential and nonessential amino acids. I soon developed a natural and safe product that provided fast acting relief of the symptoms of eczema. Additionally, I received testimonials the product reduced reoccurring outbreaks in the same area, rejuvenated and repaired skin damage that had been done due to previous outbreaks. I also discovered that the natural formulas that I had developed appeared to reduce hair loss, strengthen existing hair follicles, and also increase normal hair growth. With millions of people, mostly children, in the United States afflicted with eczema and the positive results of those observed using my formulas developed for men, women, and children who suffer from eczema, contact dermatitis, psoriasis, hair loss or slow growing hair I decided to go public with two new and innovative products, "Xcel Nutraceuticals HGS and Xcel Nutraceuticals SO"

Delivering the All Natural Solution

"...I've had eczema for a number of years, thought I just had dry skin so I became addicted to moisturizers...I went to a dermatologist, I gotten everything from steroid shots and nothing worked...Then I heard about Xcel...I had my doubts but within a couple of days my skin was cleared. I recently just moved out to California in my grandparents old house that was vacant...doing yard work raking up leaves when I came upon a huge swarm of fleas,...I was bit all over my body with black scars...I put it on my bites and within a couple of days they were gone, I was really impressed to see it worked with bites, it even helped even out my skin toned it evened out everything...I am now beginning to venture back out to wearing sleeveless shirts and going to the pool, I would have never have the confidence got out there like this if it was not for this product...its not a drug its just all natural ingredients that I put on my face and I'm so glad someone came up with this..."
